“The eagle gently coaxed her offspring toward the edge of the nest. Her heart quivered with conflicting emotions as she felt their resistance to her persistent nudging. “Why does the thrill of soaring have to begin with the fear of falling?” she thought. This ageless question was still unanswered for her.

As in the tradition of the species, her nest was located high on the shelf of a sheer rock face. Below there was nothing but air to support the wings of each child. “Is it possible that this time it will not work?” she thought. Despite her fears, the eagle knew it was time. Her parental mission was all but complete. There remained one final task – the push.

The eagle drew courage from an innate wisdom. Until her children discovered their wings, there was no purpose for their lives. Until they learned how to soar, they would fail to understand the privilege it was to have been born an eagle. The push was the greatest gift she had to offer. It was her supreme act of love. And so one by one she pushed them, and they flew!”

Author, Even Eagles Need a Push

As this summer draws to a close, this opening verse may have you thinking about sending a child off to school, whether it be kindergarten, college or any grade in between. As a parent, the greatest gift you can give to your child(ren) is the confidence and wisdom to leave home...if just for a day or to start a life of their own.

However, I’d like to explore the ability to muster up your own confidence to face your fears and discover your true sense of purpose. I recall a former pastor said once that “We were all born on...
“purpose for a purpose.” Our quest is to figure out what that purpose may be.
